Graber CBC.aspx Emmy Graber, M.D., will direct the Cosmetic Bootcamp University (CBCU) in Boston on December 7.

“CBC University offers a distinguished panel of speakers who are leaders in cosmetic dermatology. The meeting is tailored toward residents and fellows at the start of their careers and offers an environment that fosters learning through lectures, live patient demonstrations, and Q&A,” says Emmy Graber, M.D., director of the Cosmetic and Laser Center at Boston University. She is also assistant professor of dermatology and the associate residency training director at the Boston University School of Medicine.

As director of the Boston CBCU, she says, “I would like attendees to leave CBC University with a greater comprehension of cosmetic procedures so that they can provide exceptional patient care. It is my hope that this meeting can offer knowledge that extends beyond what one can read in a textbook or journal.”

CBCU is a comprehensive educational program offering education in real-world aesthetic medicine for residents and fellows currently enrolled in one of the core aesthetic specialties:

- Dermatology
- Ophthalmology
